ART IMITATES LIFE

Picture this. An apartment in Museum Towers becomes a work of art unto itself (above). The design team of D'Aquino Monaco Inc. acknowledge their debt to Mondrian in this wall unit which enables the owner to take advantage of the breath-taking view when alone and to use the sliding panels when opting for privacy. The upholstered wall and the bed — which is raised just high enough to see over the furniture — give the apartment an enviable layer of casual luxe.

A Showstopper. This glamorous sunburst (lower right) was designer Tori Golub's lucky find at a New York antique show. "It looked like it came from a 1960's film set," says Golub, who gave it a new home in her foyer where the frame's opulent proportions have real star quality.
